

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention concerns a method for setting the system parameters of a scanning microscope, preferably a confocal scanning microscope, acquisition of an image of the specimen performed with the scanning microscope being controlled by a control computer. After an image of the specimen is acquired at least one image quality feature is inputted by a user and is converted by the control computer into at least one system parameter of the scanning microscope.